By ZHOU WENTSING

Physiological counseling has for the first time become part of some rural officials' preparation for the upcoming travel rush, in Beijing or Chinese Lunar New Year.

Nearly 20 officials at the China Railway Chengdu Bureau headquarters were instructed by a team of psychological counselors, stressing the need that employees who deal directly with the public should maintain a positive facial expression, which usually elicits a positive response.

"The key is to develop disciplines to always manage your emotions, even in moments of frustration," said Li Xiaojun, a vice-chairwoman of the Los Angeles-based Association and founder of a psychological consulting firm.

2.98 billion trips are expected during this year’s travel rush.

The report on specifics of China’s intention of developing nuclear weapons has been approved, according to sources familiar with the Defense Ministry spokesperson. It states that "no of use of nuclear weapons against any circumstances."

Under circumstances will China use or threaten to use nuclear weapons against non-nuclear weapon states or nuclear-weapon-free zones."

Ren Gangzeng, National Defense Ministry spokesperson.

Report calls Beijing ‘major challenge’, proposes buildup of smaller warheads

Gangs: Umbrella, members sentenced in November

In November, all 27 members of a gang headed by Zhang Qianqiu in Xin, capital of Shanxi province, were sentenced to serve terms up to life for their involvement in murder, kidnapping, robbery and blackmail.

A police investigation showed that the gang has been active since 2004, when members started to set up illegal gambling facilities. Under the protection of Wan Lin, former deputy Party chief of Xinzhou County, county police turned a blind eye to the gang’s criminal activities, the court verdict said. Lin had been sentenced to 10 1/2 years for taking bribes in 2011.

"Village tyrants" Yang Feng, a researcher at the Rural Development Institute of the Chinese Academy of Social Sciences, said county and township officials are the ideal "umbrella" operators in the eye of gang members because they have real power to influence the public.

What's more shocking, is that Zhu, head of the gang, was not among the group of psychological counselors, stressing the need that employees who deal directly with the public should maintain a positive facial expression, which usually elicits a positive response.

"The key is to develop disciplines to always manage your emotions, even in moments of frustration," said Li Xiaojun, a vice-chairwoman of the Los Angeles-based Association and founder of a psychological consulting firm.

"Village tyrants" Yang Feng, a researcher at the Rural Development Institute of the Chinese Academy of Social Sciences, said county and township officials are the ideal “umbrella” operators in the eye of gang members because they have real power to influence the public.

What’s more shocking, is that Zhu, head of the gang, was not among the group of psychological counselors, stressing the need that employees who deal directly with the public should maintain a positive facial expression, which usually elicits a positive response.

"The key is to develop disciplines to always manage your emotions, even in moments of frustration," said Li Xiaojun, a vice-chairwoman of the Los Angeles-based Association and founder of a psychological consulting firm.

"Village tyrants" Yang Feng, a researcher at the Rural Development Institute of the Chinese Academy of Social Sciences, said county and township officials are the ideal “umbrella” operators in the eye of gang members because they have real power to influence the public.

What’s more shocking, is that Zhu, head of the gang, was not among the group of psychological counselors, stressing the need that employees who deal directly with the public should maintain a positive facial expression, which usually elicits a positive response.

"The key is to develop disciplines to always manage your emotions, even in moments of frustration," said Li Xiaojun, a vice-chairwoman of the Los Angeles-based Association and founder of a psychological consulting firm.

"Village tyrants" Yang Feng, a researcher at the Rural Development Institute of the Chinese Academy of Social Sciences, said county and township officials are the ideal “umbrella” operators in the eye of gang members because they have real power to influence the public.

What’s more shocking, is that Zhu, head of the gang, was not among the group of psychological counselors, stressing the need that employees who deal directly with the public should maintain a positive facial expression, which usually elicits a positive response.

"The key is to develop disciplines to always manage your emotions, even in moments of frustration," said Li Xiaojun, a vice-chairwoman of the Los Angeles-based Association and founder of a psychological consulting firm.

"Village tyrants" Yang Feng, a researcher at the Rural Development Institute of the Chinese Academy of Social Sciences, said county and township officials are the ideal “umbrella” operators in the eye of gang members because they have real power to influence the public.

What’s more shocking, is that Zhu, head of the gang, was not among the group of psychological counselors, stressing the need that employees who deal directly with the public should maintain a positive facial expression, which usually elicits a positive response.

"The key is to develop disciplines to always manage your emotions, even in moments of frustration," said Li Xiaojun, a vice-chairwoman of the Los Angeles-based Association and founder of a psychological consulting firm.

"Village tyrants" Yang Feng, a researcher at the Rural Development Institute of the Chinese Academy of Social Sciences, said county and township officials are the ideal “umbrella” operators in the eye of gang members because they have real power to influence the public.

What’s more shocking, is that Zhu, head of the gang, was not among the group of psychological counselors, stressing the need that employees who deal directly with the public should maintain a positive facial expression, which usually elicits a positive response.

"The key is to develop disciplines to always manage your emotions, even in moments of frustration," said Li Xiaojun, a vice-chairwoman of the Los Angeles-based Association and founder of a psychological consulting firm.

"Village tyrants" Yang Feng, a researcher at the Rural Development Institute of the Chinese Academy of Social Sciences, said county and township officials are the ideal “umbrella” operators in the eye of gang members because they have real power to influence the public.

What’s more shocking, is that Zhu, head of the gang, was not among the group of psychological counselors, stressing the need that employees who deal directly with the public should maintain a positive facial expression, which usually elicits a positive response.

"The key is to develop disciplines to always manage your emotions, even in moments of frustration," said Li Xiaojun, a vice-chairwoman of the Los Angeles-based Association and founder of a psychological consulting firm.

"Village tyrants" Yang Feng, a researcher at the Rural Development Institute of the Chinese Academy of Social Sciences, said county and township officials are the ideal “umbrella” operators in the eye of gang members because they have real power to influence the public.

What’s more shocking, is that Zhu, head of the gang, was not among the group of psychological counselors, stressing the need that employees who deal directly with the public should maintain a positive facial expression, which usually elicits a positive response.

"The key is to develop disciplines to always manage your emotions, even in moments of frustration," said Li Xiaojun, a vice-chairwoman of the Los Angeles-based Association and founder of a psychological consulting firm.

"Village tyrants" Yang Feng, a researcher at the Rural Development Institute of the Chinese Academy of Social Sciences, said county and township officials are the ideal “umbrella” operators in the eye of gang members because they have real power to influence the public.

What’s more shocking, is that Zhu, head of the gang, was not among the group of psychological counselors, stressing the need that employees who deal directly with the public should maintain a positive facial expression, which usually elicits a positive response.

"The key is to develop disciplines to always manage your emotions, even in moments of frustration," said Li Xiaojun, a vice-chairwoman of the Los Angeles-based Association and founder of a psychological consulting firm.

"Village tyrants" Yang Feng, a researcher at the Rural Development Institute of the Chinese Academy of Social Sciences, said county and township officials are the ideal “umbrella” operators in the eye of gang members because they have real power to influence the public.

What’s more shocking, is that Zhu, head of the gang, was not among the group of psychological counselors, stressing the need that employees who deal directly with the public should maintain a positive facial expression, which usually elicits a positive response.

"The key is to develop disciplines to always manage your emotions, even in moments of frustration," said Li Xiaojun, a vice-chairwoman of the Los Angeles-based Association and founder of a psychological consulting firm.

"Village tyrants" Yang Feng, a researcher at the Rural Development Institute of the Chinese Academy of Social Sciences, said county and township officials are the ideal “umbrella” operators in the eye of gang members because they have real power to influence the public.

What’s more shocking, is that Zhu, head of the gang, was not among the group of psychological counselors, stressing the need that employees who deal directly with the public should maintain a positive facial expression, which usually elicits a positive response.

"The key is to develop disciplines to always manage your emotions, even in moments of frustration," said Li Xiaojun, a vice-chairwoman of the Los Angeles-based Association and founder of a psychological consulting firm.

"Village tyrants" Yang Feng, a researcher at the Rural Development Institute of the Chinese Academy of Social Sciences, said county and township officials are the ideal “umbrella” operators in the eye of gang members because they have real power to influence the public.

What’s more shocking, is that Zhu, head of the gang, was not among the group of psychological counselors, stressing the need that employees who deal directly with the public should maintain a positive facial expression, which usually elicits a positive response.

"The key is to develop disciplines to always manage your emotions, even in moments of frustration," said Li Xiaojun, a vice-chairwoman of the Los Angeles-based Association and founder of a psychological consulting firm.

"Village tyrants" Yang Feng, a researcher at the Rural Development Institute of the Chinese Academy of Social Sciences, said county and township officials are the ideal “umbrella” operators in the eye of gang members because they have real power to influence the public.

What’s more shocking, is that Zhu, head of the gang, was not among the group of psychological counselors, stressing the need that employees who deal directly with the public should maintain a positive facial expression, which usually elicits a positive response.

"The key is to develop disciplines to always manage your emotions, even in moments of frustration," said Li Xiaojun, a vice-chairwoman of the Los Angeles-based Association and founder of a psychological consulting firm.