Young fish released into Dalian seas

Local companies and volunteers helping native species to proliferate

Thirty-people of Dalian Ocean Fishing Co Ltd and more than 40 environmental volunteers released 100,000 young flounder on July 7 near the Yellow Sea, northern China's Liaon.

Small boats carried the volunteers from the port to the area where they poured the young flounders into the sea.

"This species of flounder is the same size as a large hand. At 01 centimeters long, these young flounders are "turtles" early", said Ge Shuang, deputy general manager of Dalian Ocean Fishing.

This marks the first time that the company had sponsored Dalian's public participation in marine protection of endangered species. Since 2011, the company has spirited $54.83 million for such an event every year.

"Our company benefits from the ocean and should give back to society, to maintain a sustainable marine ecosystem", said Ge.

Founded in 2001, Dalian Ocean Fishing was among the first companies to establish a below market price.

It is estimated that the output provides sufficient growth time for the released fish and increases their survival rate.

"The activity sponsored by our company this year has increased the number of marine organisms, but also raises public awareness of marine environmental protection, and has become an effective way to participate in the protection of marine resources and the ecological environment," Jin said.

This year, Dalian Deyou Ocean Fishing Co Ltd provided the young flounders which are nearly 0.4 meters in total length.

"It is very meaningful to be involved in such an environmental charity activity, and it is also a great honor for me", said Ge Shuang, general manager of Dalian AquaFor.

The Yellow Sea is a natural reserve, which is the result of the continuous em-

Our relationship with Dalian Deyou Ocean Fishing Co Ltd will be increased to 100,000 young flounders, benefiting 30,000 fishes.

"We will also pay for surgical procedures for patients with congenital visual impairments in the Langxiu Shan autonomous protective area of Hainan province.

In the next three years, Baidu plans to build 10 tourist demonstration areas to promote the construction of eco-duction, and the Central Committee of the Communist Youth League in 2009 to provide public space to agriculture for rural residents. So far, more than 13,000 companies have participated in the project, helping residents in 310 counties to benefit from 900,000,000 yuan, and over 20,000 volunteers in related area.
