Global talent flocking to work in China

Forbes report says nation becoming major destination, international hub

By SHI JING in Shanghai

China is attracting more global talent than ever, a new report by Forbes shows, reflecting a phenomenon that has been long observed by researchers and various organizations.

The Global Talent Mobility and Wealth Management Center, founded by Chinese expert Prof. Xie Guoquan, said in the report that China was the third largest source country of students studying abroad, behind the United States and the United Kingdom.

By “that time, China will be the only largest export country of students studying abroad, but also a major des- tination for global talent to set- tle down,” said Professor Xie Guoquan, founder of the Global Talent Mobility and Wealth Management Center.

This is not to say that China has won the global talent race. But it is a clear sign that the country is becoming a major destination for global talent.

The report cited a survey by the World Economic Forum in March this year, which found that China was the third largest source country of students studying abroad, behind the United States and the United Kingdom.

China was also the third largest source country of students studying abroad, behind the United States and the United Kingdom, according to the survey.

China won 15 gold, seven silver and one bronze medal in the competition, according to the WorldSkills website.

“Global talent flocking to work in China” is the title of the report by Forbes.

The report said China had become the third largest source country of students studying abroad, behind the United States and the United Kingdom.

China is becoming a major destination for global talent, with the country receiving a significant number of students from abroad.

China is attracting more global talent than ever, according to a new report by Forbes.

China was the third largest source country of students studying abroad, behind the United States and the United Kingdom, according to the report.

China was also the third largest source country of students studying abroad, behind the United States and the United Kingdom, according to the report.

China has become a major destination for global talent, with the country receiving a significant number of students from abroad.

China is attracting more global talent than ever, according to a new report by Forbes.

China was the third largest source country of students studying abroad, behind the United States and the United Kingdom, according to the report.

China was also the third largest source country of students studying abroad, behind the United States and the United Kingdom, according to the report.

China has become a major destination for global talent, with the country receiving a significant number of students from abroad.

China is attracting more global talent than ever, according to a new report by Forbes.

China was the third largest source country of students studying abroad, behind the United States and the United Kingdom, according to the report.

China was also the third largest source country of students studying abroad, behind the United States and the United Kingdom, according to the report.

China has become a major destination for global talent, with the country receiving a significant number of students from abroad.

China is attracting more global talent than ever, according to a new report by Forbes.

China was the third largest source country of students studying abroad, behind the United States and the United Kingdom, according to the report.

China was also the third largest source country of students studying abroad, behind the United States and the United Kingdom, according to the report.

China has become a major destination for global talent, with the country receiving a significant number of students from abroad.

China is attracting more global talent than ever, according to a new report by Forbes.

China was the third largest source country of students studying abroad, behind the United States and the United Kingdom, according to the report.

China was also the third largest source country of students studying abroad, behind the United States and the United Kingdom, according to the report.

China has become a major destination for global talent, with the country receiving a significant number of students from abroad.

China is attracting more global talent than ever, according to a new report by Forbes.

China was the third largest source country of students studying abroad, behind the United States and the United Kingdom, according to the report.

China was also the third largest source country of students studying abroad, behind the United States and the United Kingdom, according to the report.

China has become a major destination for global talent, with the country receiving a significant number of students from abroad.

China is attracting more global talent than ever, according to a new report by Forbes.

China was the third largest source country of students studying abroad, behind the United States and the United Kingdom, according to the report.

China was also the third largest source country of students studying abroad, behind the United States and the United Kingdom, according to the report.

China has become a major destination for global talent, with the country receiving a significant number of students from abroad.

China is attracting more global talent than ever, according to a new report by Forbes.

China was the third largest source country of students studying abroad, behind the United States and the United Kingdom, according to the report.

China was also the third largest source country of students studying abroad, behind the United States and the United Kingdom, according to the report.

China has become a major destination for global talent, with the country receiving a significant number of students from abroad.

China is attracting more global talent than ever, according to a new report by Forbes.

China was the third largest source country of students studying abroad, behind the United States and the United Kingdom, according to the report.

China was also the third largest source country of students studying abroad, behind the United States and the United Kingdom, according to the report.

China has become a major destination for global talent, with the country receiving a significant number of students from abroad.

China is attracting more global talent than ever, according to a new report by Forbes.

China was the third largest source country of students studying abroad, behind the United States and the United Kingdom, according to the report.

China was also the third largest source country of students studying abroad, behind the United States and the United Kingdom, according to the report.

China has become a major destination for global talent, with the country receiving a significant number of students from abroad.

China is attracting more global talent than ever, according to a new report by Forbes.

China was the third largest source country of students studying abroad, behind the United States and the United Kingdom, according to the report.

China was also the third largest source country of students studying abroad, behind the United States and the United Kingdom, according to the report.

China has become a major destination for global talent, with the country receiving a significant number of students from abroad.

China is attracting more global talent than ever, according to a new report by Forbes.

China was the third largest source country of students studying abroad, behind the United States and the United Kingdom, according to the report.

China was also the third largest source country of students studying abroad, behind the United States and the United Kingdom, according to the report.

China has become a major destination for global talent, with the country receiving a significant number of students from abroad.