Bologna, summer.

Andrea and Gabriele are two friends and schoolmates. They are 14 years old.

Andrea is a precise boy, sensible, and an only child. He is a good swimmer and he spends many hours in the pool. He loves swimming because it's a methodical sport, without physical contact, clean, that allows him to think and partly to get away from what surrounds him. Gabri is his opposite: chaotic, impulsive, volcanic, and always dissatisfied. The two are like complementary angles: different but pointed in the same direction.

During a summer different from others, an unpredictable, dangerous, decisive summer, they find the answer to a question that has not yet been asked. Andrea will find that to live an adventure isn't enough to feel grown up, and he will finally have the opportunity to reconsider his friendship with Gabri.

Cherry Village

It is Cao Wenxuan's 2020 full-length novel about two rural children who struggle to find their lost grandmother. Elder brother Maitian and younger sister Maisui live with their grandmother in the Cherry Village after their parents go out to work. Due to old age and amnesia, their grandmother gets lost by accident. In order to find the most important family member in life, the little brother and sister decide to begin a long, hard, and tortuous journey with their best friends, a white goose and a goat. This is an "on the road" bildungsroman carrying a dream of reunion, a long journey supported by pure goodness of human nature, as well as a spiritual baptism brought by family and friendship. The two children have developed good personality in the Cherry Village, and hardships in the journey make them achieve transformation and growth. In this novel, we can see the light of human nature illuminate the difficult, strange journey to find the loved one. The children encounter all kinds of things along the way, and experience the test and nourishment of the vast and colorful real world. They never change their original intention, remain optimistic, and learn to be grateful and cherish what they have. The goat and the white goose, keeping them company along the way, become powerful animal images in the story with their striking and moving chivalry, which gives the novel more romantic characteristics.

Salute to the Teachers

This book is the latest original children's novel by Ms. Huang Beijia. The protagonist is a girl called Xiao Tong who was born in a family of teachers and grows up in a teacher's yard, so her world is always filled with the fragrance of books, which is quite different from that of other children. The normal, earthy and skilled teachers, and the interesting and hilarious little moments are just like bright stars in the dark sky, illuminating and warming Xiao Tong's growth path.

This novel depicts several teachers' bittersweet life in the town with innocent and humorous touch. It not only demonstrates the essence of traditional Chinese teaching, but also presents the teachers' daily life and virtues in an earnest and moving way. The work describes a long period, serious but interesting souls, dramatic plots, fascinating and lovely scenes that may appear in films, all of which contribute to the childlike playfulness and the lingering charm of the novel by Ms. Huang Beijia.

Pacific, Atlantic

This book is the latest original children's novel by Ms. Huang Beijia.

The Thorn Birds Children's Chorus from Nanjing traveled to Dublin, Ireland for a world-class children's chorus competition. The night before they leave Dublin, a Chinese man over eighty-year-old comes to meet three members in the chorus and shows them a brass trumpet mouthpiece, which he intended to give to his friend seventy years ago. A story that spans decades thus begins.

Back in 1964, the National School of Music for Young Children is located in a mansion in the southeast of Danyang, Zhenjiang. Surrounded by the sound of music, an introverted boy with a complicated background, whose name is Doremi, takes a fancy to music. A second-hand brass trumpet, a small crumbling house, and the March in B-flat major, all bear witness to the deep, sincere friendship in troubled times.

The story unfolds in a dual narrative that is similar to the form of polyphony, freely switching between different times and spaces, from the past to the present. It illustrates some tearful coming-of-age memories of a music prodigy. Through the story of an old overseas Chinese searching for his friend thousands of miles away, the author masterly combines together the beauty of art, the love of family and country, the truth of history, and the fate of the characters, thus presenting a literary masterpiece with a light touch.

I Want to Be Good

This is a novel that appeals to the kids as well as teachers and parents. It depicts the school and home life of a primary school pupil Jin Ling, and tells of how this quick-witted, kind-hearted and upright girl, who is soon to graduate with probably a middling record, strives with great efforts, and even with some "contentions" to be a "good girl" in order to satisfy her parents and teachers. It successfully creates some believable characters such as Jin Ling, her classmates, and many parents and teachers. With its well developed artistic plot and fluent language, which reflect the characteristics of the time and the rich flavor of life, the novel is not only vivid and touching, but also gives much food for thought.

A Journey of 9000 Millimetres

Five-year-old Xiaopo uses a ruler to measure his house and finds out that it is actually quite big: 9000 millimeters in length and 5000 millimeters in width! Because their parents are in hospital, Xiaopo and his nine-year-old sister are quarantined at home under the care of the community. The two siblings imagine themselves being as small as ants and start an adventure in their "big" house. When they travel to the balcony, they find the seeds of marigolds they sowed last year have sprouted. They know dad and mom will soon be back, since mom had told them before she left home that they would be back in spring. The two kids find hope and gradually grow up.

Grandpa's Fourteen Games

After Chinese New Year, dad and mom, a doctor and a nurse, have gone to Wuhan to fight the epidemic, leaving grandpa and the little girl at home. The little girl does not know the building is in quarantine and that residents cannot go out. To have the girl staying at home happily, grandpa comes up with an idea: playing games with the little girl during the fourteen days with one game each day. The little girl plays the roles of doctor, scientist, policewoman, soldier, community manager, and even patient. Every day, she expects the coming games, through which she experiences how people from all walks of life selflessly dedicate themselves to fighting hard with the epidemic.

Mum Is Hiding

Since her father works in Africa for the local construction assistance, only the little girl and her mother are at home. During a grocery shopping, her mother happens to have close contact with someone who is later confirmed as a COVID-19 case. The mother worries about the possibility that she might be infected by the virus, so she isolates herself in a small room. On one side, there is the helpless little girl full of fear and worry; on the other side, the mother has to try everything she can to comfort her daughter. A short distance away, and yet poles apart. Fortunately, the community staff come to their aid in time.

The Mask that Loves to Count

A N95 mask that loves to count numbers is bought by a father during the epidemic. As the only N95 mask in the family, it is treasured by everyone. The son gives the mask to the father, who is going to support the epidemic area; the father, arriving at the front line of the battle against the epidemic, gives the mask to his patient; cherishing the mask, the patient gives it to the medical workers, who are most in need of N95 masks... Being a gift time and time again, this mask that loves to count is deeply moved by people's love.
