E-commerce fights against poverty

Yanhe government encourages companies to take on rural poverty alleviation projects.

T he Yanhe government hopes to remove the county from the national-level poverty towns or counties list by 2021. This is the government’s plan. The county, located in Guizhou province’s Jiande county, is named after the fruit tree.

Related sectors, such as logistics, will also continue to deepen the implementation of national strategies with regard to efficient resource utilization and offer visitors another enjoyable sight. “The biggest problem is the lack of market channels and products,” said Wu Zhaohui, deputy director of Group’s business-to-consumer platform.

The province’s top sightseeing destination, Anshun is becoming a national nature reserve in Tongren, Guizhou province.

If one wants to learn about how Han Chinese people lived 600 years ago, one of the best places for field trips is a village in southwest China’s Guizhou province.

Anshun fortified villages drive rural decent developments

PHOTOS PROVIDED TO CHINA DAILY

As the integration deepens, local tourism authorities are working on creating scenic spots with tourist facilities.

On January 1, 2017, the province’s tourism industry’s trade volume is expected to exceed 80 billion yuan, while its trade volume in the export-oriented industrial zone will exceed 56 billion yuan, said Shen Xinguo, deputy head of the province’s Commerce Department.

China’s agriculture is an important part of the country’s economy and is a major source of income for rural residents. However, the future development of China’s electronic business will not be as smooth sailing.

The province’s tourism industry’s trade volume is expected to exceed 80 billion yuan, while its trade volume in the export-oriented industrial zone will exceed 56 billion yuan, said Shen Xinguo, deputy head of the province’s Commerce Department.

Charming natural view in rural areas in southwest China’s Guizhou province.

Anshun fortified villages drive rural decent developments

If one wants to learn about how Han Chinese people lived 600 years ago, one of the best places for field trips is a village in southwest China’s Guizhou province.

Anshun fortified villages drive rural decent developments

PHOTOS PROVIDED TO CHINA DAILY

As the integration deepens, local tourism authorities are working on creating scenic spots with tourist facilities.

On January 1, 2017, the province’s tourism industry’s trade volume is expected to exceed 80 billion yuan, while its trade volume in the export-oriented industrial zone will exceed 56 billion yuan, said Shen Xinguo, deputy head of the province’s Commerce Department.

China’s agriculture is an important part of the country’s economy and is a major source of income for rural residents. However, the future development of China’s electronic business will not be as smooth sailing.

The province’s tourism industry’s trade volume is expected to exceed 80 billion yuan, while its trade volume in the export-oriented industrial zone will exceed 56 billion yuan, said Shen Xinguo, deputy head of the province’s Commerce Department.

Charming natural view in rural areas in southwest China’s Guizhou province.

Anshun fortified villages drive rural decent developments

If one wants to learn about how Han Chinese people lived 600 years ago, one of the best places for field trips is a village in southwest China’s Guizhou province.

Anshun fortified villages drive rural decent developments

PHOTOS PROVIDED TO CHINA DAILY

As the integration deepens, local tourism authorities are working on creating scenic spots with tourist facilities.

On January 1, 2017, the province’s tourism industry’s trade volume is expected to exceed 80 billion yuan, while its trade volume in the export-oriented industrial zone will exceed 56 billion yuan, said Shen Xinguo, deputy head of the province’s Commerce Department.

China’s agriculture is an important part of the country’s economy and is a major source of income for rural residents. However, the future development of China’s electronic business will not be as smooth sailing.

The province’s tourism industry’s trade volume is expected to exceed 80 billion yuan, while its trade volume in the export-oriented industrial zone will exceed 56 billion yuan, said Shen Xinguo, deputy head of the province’s Commerce Department.

Charming natural view in rural areas in southwest China’s Guizhou province.

Anshun fortified villages drive rural decent developments

If one wants to learn about how Han Chinese people lived 600 years ago, one of the best places for field trips is a village in southwest China’s Guizhou province.

Anshun fortified villages drive rural decent developments

PHOTOS PROVIDED TO CHINA DAILY

As the integration deepens, local tourism authorities are working on creating scenic spots with tourist facilities.

On January 1, 2017, the province’s tourism industry’s trade volume is expected to exceed 80 billion yuan, while its trade volume in the export-oriented industrial zone will exceed 56 billion yuan, said Shen Xinguo, deputy head of the province’s Commerce Department.

China’s agriculture is an important part of the country’s economy and is a major source of income for rural residents. However, the future development of China’s electronic business will not be as smooth sailing.

The province’s tourism industry’s trade volume is expected to exceed 80 billion yuan, while its trade volume in the export-oriented industrial zone will exceed 56 billion yuan, said Shen Xinguo, deputy head of the province’s Commerce Department.