With the increasing number of foreign talents entering China for work, immigration and family visit, the demand for personal documents such as marriage certificate, birth certificate, criminal record certificate, academic qualification to be used abroad has greatly increased. There are usually two ways of authentication, Apostille and legalization. Apostille is only valid for use in countries or regions that have either ratified or acceded to Hague Convention of 5th of October 1961. In China, Hong Kong and Macao are two regions that have ratified the Convention, so Apostille is required when documents are to be used in such regions.
