The performance of Chinese rescuers in a high-level, ready-for-international-operation emergency, an international peer review of their rescue efforts and a special visit from UN officials made the week of September 21-27, 2014, a place of international attention.

This is the week that China’s rescue team is officially recognized excellent. News of this can’t be made for a total of 48 hours and can be self-certified for a total of 48 hours, for a response in the face of challenges.

By the same token on September 19th, the week-long, international level, disaster management and rescue team evaluation concluded. The performance of Chinese international rescue teams in this evaluation performed at a high level.

On Wednesday, according to the UN Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, furthermore, China’s Shanghai International Search & Rescue Team passed the evaluation. The UN Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, adding that after five years, they have kept their abilities at a high level.

The International Search & Rescue Team received the classification in recognition of their efforts.

The China International Search & Rescue Team first received the classification in 2011, when the second Shanghai “Peace Mission” was held in Asia following Singapore. The team must be re-evaluated every five years in order to keep the title, under UN rules.

The 480-member Chinese team has participated in 12 international rescue efforts, including the devastating earthquake in Japan in 2011. Both the disaster-stricken countries and other countries’ rescue team have a positive image about the Chinese rescue team members, Khalikov said.

“Compared with other foreign rescue teams, the Chinese team has an outstanding, significant feature with acts,” said Chen Hong, an expert who worked with the team during the Japan earthquake. After Haiti was hit by an earthquake in January in 2010, the Chinese team was on the scene earlier than before that of the UN, which neighbors the Carib, the team said.

“We have professional documents of the technical members with some medical knowledge, as many other countries,” she added, adding that strong support from inform, and good physical condition of the team has boosted the Chinese team’s confidence in international rescue.

The team consists of manufacturing or selling counterfeit or inferior products, according to a statement released by the CPC Central Committee and the State Council.
