A big task ahead

Southern paradise looks for Western guests

GROUND LEVEL TOURISM

catering to foreign tastes

Li Bing, 86, a 12th-generation descendant of the Su family in Zhongyuan town in Qionghai, centre of Hainan, said: “We are not averse to a drop-off point on a cruise, or a stop-over point. However, we are not used to a cruise. We are not used to going on a trip. We are not used to the idea of being dropped off at the hotel, being picked up, and then going to the airport. We are not used to the idea of being taken to a different place, and then being taken back to the hotel.”

Su Yingli, 63, was born in a restaurant in the capital, Hainan. She is the daughter of Su Ji, a Hainanese architect who designed the Burj Al Arab, the tallest skyscraper in the United Arab Emirates, and will soon be the tallest building in the world.

Sitting in a restaurant in the capital, Hainan, she says: “We are not used to the idea of being taken to a different place, and then going to the airport. We are not used to the idea of being taken to a different place, and then going to the airport. We are not used to the idea of being taken to a different place, and then going to the airport. We are not used to the idea of being taken to a different place, and then going to the airport.”

Sitting in a restaurant in the capital, Hainan, she says: “We are not used to the idea of being taken to a different place, and then going to the airport. We are not used to the idea of being taken to a different place, and then going to the airport. We are not used to the idea of being taken to a different place, and then going to the airport. We are not used to the idea of being taken to a different place, and then going to the airport.”

Sitting in a restaurant in the capital, Hainan, she says: “We are not used to the idea of being taken to a different place, and then going to the airport. We are not used to the idea of being taken to a different place, and then going to the airport. We are not used to the idea of being taken to a different place, and then going to the airport. We are not used to the idea of being taken to a different place, and then going to the airport.”

Sitting in a restaurant in the capital, Hainan, she says: “We are not used to the idea of being taken to a different place, and then going to the airport. We are not used to the idea of being taken to a different place, and then going to the airport. We are not used to the idea of being taken to a different place, and then going to the airport. We are not used to the idea of being taken to a different place, and then going to the airport.